Outside his profession he was interested in all good causes, but his chief interest lay, perhaps, in art, and he was President of the Otago Public Art Gallery Association.

In 1918, his work for the community was recognised by the award of the C.M.G., and, six years later, by the bestowal of a Knighthood.

The words of the present Dean of the Otago Medical School sum up the character of one who will long be remembered by his colleagues.

“His contribution to Medical education in New Zealand was monumental, and, for a generation, he gave himself unsparsingly, without thought of financial reward, to the leadership of the Medical School. His foresight, wisdom and breadth of vision were instrumental in raising the school from obscurity to its present position. His hospitality and kindness to staff, to students, and to patients were proverbial, and benevolence was the keynote of his nature.”
